

NDDP SAMARTH SAARTHI SAMUH

A Focus Group Discussion with NDDP Mothers

Unveiling chapters of strengths

“When people ask me if I'm a working woman, I often say no. Despite not having a traditional job, my days are packed with various responsibilities. From cooking meals to getting my kids ready for school and managing the needs of my husband and in-laws, the list of my tasks is never-ending. Despite my efforts, I believe others work even more tirelessly. The adage holds true - 'A woman's work is never done.’” – Rinki Devi

“Under parental pressure, I got married at a young age and assumed the responsibility of my spouse's family. Now a mother of two, I am determined to pursue my education. Joining the Newgen Digital Discovery Paathshala (NDDP) has instilled in me the confidence to resume my studies. I am reaching out to NDDP for support in completing my 10th-grade education.” – Priyanka

“Being raised in a children's home, I missed out on the presence of my mother. The affection I longed for has been absent in my marriage and family life. Presently employed in an NGO to take care of my necessities, my initial experience with the Newgen Digital Discovery Paathshala (NDDP) offered a haven to express my challenges without fear of judgment. I value the supportive atmosphere here and anticipate fostering my personal growth and learning through NDDP.” – Kanan

“This marks my first session with the Newgen Digital Discovery Paathshala (NDDP). As a homemaker with seven children, opportunities to step outside and connect with other women are infrequent for me. The atmosphere here is both relaxing and comforting, allowing everyone to speak up openly and share their concerns.” – Radha Negi

“I frequently participate in the NDDP mothers' digital online sessions and am acquiring valuable knowledge, from operating devices to using Google and YouTube for searches. Each session brings me joy as I connect with everyone here. The handicraft items I crafted were successfully sold at the crafts exhibition, marking my initial earnings and I am super happy about it. This accomplishment fills me with immense pride, serving as a significant recognition of my efforts.” – Soni

SANTOSMITA CHATTERJEE
CSR Team